If you want to learn how to homeschool from someone who has real life experience homeschooling, then check out "How To Homeschool" by Jane Rodda. This is an excellent resource for parents. Whether you are merely considering the option, just starting out, or are an established homeschooler looking for advice and encouragement, this guide will suit your needs. Jane takes an honest look at the homeschooling issue and gives real life, practical advice on how to homeschool. She doesn't just give directions from the sidelines. She gives examples from her own experience as a homeschooling mother to four children. This guide examines several different areas of homeschooling, including: - Making the decision to homeschool - Scheduling - Choosing Your Curriculum - Legal Issues - Socialization The guide includes step-by-step instructions and pinpointed lists of both what to do and what not to do. Jane Rodda realizes that parents have a lot of issues to consider and experience, and helps to give accurate information without overloading you with details. She also realizes that there are several options available for parents who are looking to homeschool, and she addresses the many different options from an unbiased view point. She does share her own personal story, but does not try to sway your decision. Making the decision to homeschool can be an exciting, yet somewhat frightening event. There are many questions to consider, and it is a decision that should not be made lightly. How to Homeschool Your Children helps take away the fear of homeschooling. Reading this guide will help you feel more prepared and confident to make the best decision for your family. This guide helps homeschooling become a rewarding and enriching experience for everyone. About the Expert Jane Rodda holds a Bachelor's Degree in Liberal Studies with a concentration in Psychology from Point Loma Nazarene University in San Diego, California. She currently lives in Nashville, Tennessee, but has previously lived and worked in several places in the United States. Jane has over twenty years experience working in Christian Day Camps. Her first job was as an assistant craft counselor, and through the years she worked her way up to eventually directing the camps, and then eventually pioneering a brand new day camp program which served a community desperately in need of programs for children. She wrote How To Start a Christian Day Camp because she passionately believes that Day Camps provide an excellent opportunity for churches to be able to reach several members of the community. Jane has seen camps meet the needs of parents, by providing something for their children; kids, by providing fun and exciting programs, and youth, by providing an opportunity to serve. Jane has learned a lot through all of her experiences, and she seeks to help others learn as well. Her hope is that churches or individuals will be encouraged and inspired to start Christian Day Camps and see the fun and exciting changes they can bring to a community. HowExpert publishes quick 'how to' guides on all topics from A to Z by everyday experts. The goal of this summer camp curriculum is to create an environment where every student feels success and inclusion and is inspired to learn, play and explore. It offers staff the opportunity to find tools to create their own programs for the campers within a defined curriculum. This book is designed to give teacher instructions for one week English camps. There are many factors for students' poor command of English among international students in the native language institutions. One of the factors is the students' negative attitude and low motivation in English learning. Another aspect to lower students' English learning motivation is the inappropriate use of the learning materials. Moreover, learners still lack a chance to immerse in the real language environment and the authentic cultural background to improve their comprehensively intercultural and communicative competence. For the sake that the second language instruction provided in regular schools is limited in time, many students even do not have enough time to learn and interact in the language. In addition, the students still learn English with the outdated teaching and learning strategies so that they are very afraid of opening their mouths and hearts to communicate with their peers and ask for help from the tutors. This field project took advantage of the sources and theories from the study and practical applications of the intensive ESL camp programs to build a set of curricula and excursion activities which include the cultural assets of learners on a daily basis in the authentic and intercultural environments. International students have the demand for immersive and short-term language programs and this field project contributes to be compatible with their needs. Intercultural communicative competence is an important facilitating factor in the acquisition of second language. The materials, curriculum, exercises and excursion activities in the project can help international ESL students develop their English proficiency and intercultural communicative abilities. This project can also fill the scarce knowledge currently on the topic of ESL extensive classroom and activities. The teachers and curriculum developers can utilize this project as a kind of reference to organize their language teaching in ESL camp and guide their camp activities' design and curriculum development. Military family support programs have proliferated in recent years, but there has been little evaluation of whether these programs are meeting their key objectives. To help fill this gap, a RAND study explored the curriculum, themes, and outcomes of Operation Purple, a free weeklong summer camp program for youth with a deployed parent. In 1992, Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) and the US Department of Energy (DOE) began a collaborative pilot project with the Portland Parks and Recreation Community Schools Program and others to provide summer science camps to children in Grades 4--6. Camps run two weeks in duration between late June and mid-August. Sessions are five days per week, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. In addition to hands-on science and math curriculum, at least three field trips are incorporated into the educational learning experience. The purpose of the BPA/DOE summer camps is to make available opportunities for fun, motivating experiences in science to students who otherwise would have difficulty accessing them. This includes inner city, minority, rural and low income students. Public law 101-510, which Congress passed in 1990, authorizes DOE facilities to establish collaborative inner-city and rural partnership programs in science and math. A primary goal of the BPA summer hands on science camps is to bring affordable science camp experiences to students where they live. It uses everyday materials to engage students' minds and to give them a sense that they have succeeded through a fun hands-on learning environment. This book contains instructions for teaching one week English camps. Amazing resource for vacation bible school(VBS), youth camp, children summer camp, or youth bible study groups. Christian leaders have found it is increasingly difficult to teach the Word of God to students. That is, unless you can "blow their minds"! Engage them with highly interactive materials that expose them to things previously unimaginable. The Mind-Blowing curriculum partners perfectly with Secret Church curriculum for these very reasons. To teach children to love the Lord, they must first learn who He is. Naturally, they will be fascinated by His works! Only then will they begin to understand why people all over the world would allow themselves to be persecuted for the gospel. The Mind Blown series is designed to amaze children by God's true stories, while simultaneously teaching the truth of God's wrath, His faithfulness, and His desire for us to follow Him. We do this by diving deep into the lives of Elijah, King Nebuchadnezzar, and Korah. Secret Church will combine the story of Saul turned Paul with the objective to educate youths about how the world around them worships. Compassion, a deeper love for God, and awareness are the objectives. The hope is that you are willing to create an experience that brings this oppressed setting to life. Syria, North Korea, and Iraq are the countries of focus. Abstract: Americans are less connected to society and each other than in the recent past. This disconnection has a variety of repercussions for quality of life, including decreased capabilities for local problem solving, decreased capacity for community youth development, higher levels of crime, and decreased indicators of community health. Research has indicated that if we are to address this growing disconnect, we need to foster civic skills, civic values, and commitment to civic engagement in youth to encourage lifelong civic participation. Summer camps may offer an arena within which to address these civic issues; however, summer camp remains largely underrepresented in the social capital and civic engagement literature. As a result, there is a need for further research on the potential role summer camp may play in fostering civic and social capital outcomes in youth. The purpose of this study was to implement and evaluate the Teens Leading & Connecting (TLC) program, a structured camp curriculum intentionally designed to impact campers' civic skills, civic values, civic engagement and social capital, in order to provide insight into camp's potential role as an avenue to increased civic engagement and social capital in campers' home communities. The methods for this study consisted of an implementation evaluation, including direct observations and facilitator interviews, and an outcomes evaluation, including camper interviews, camper questionnaires, and parent interviews. Findings indicate that the TLC program was delivered with quality and high fidelity and resulted in a variety of skill related, community related, and social capital related outcomes in the short term. Many of these outcomes were sustained three months following camp; however, the social capital outcomes were the least retained of the three groups of outcomes at follow-up. This study represented one attempt to leverage the combined power of the summer camp environment, of structured curriculum, and of program evaluation to explore summer camp as a possible arena to foster youth civic engagement and social capital. This study demonstrated that summer camp has promise to achieve civic engagement and social capital outcomes beyond camp but more research and program development on these crucial societal topics is needed. Bereavement Camps for Children and Adolescents is the first book to describe in detail how to create bereavement camps for children and adolescents. It is a comprehensive how-to guide, offering practical advice on planning, curriculum building, and evaluation. Readers will find a step-by-step plan for building a non-profit organization, including board development and fundraising, such as grant writing, soliciting businesses, and holding special events, as well as valuable information on nonprofit management and volunteer recruitment. The appendices include a variety of sample forms, letters, and more. Camp Granada is a curriculum and administrative guide to organize a music camp in your school, church, community center, or wherever there are people who love music and who desire to share that love of music with young children. Its theme-based lessons blend the instructional rigor of formal music learning with the fun, excitement, and life-changing atmosphere of summer camp, and integrate arts and classroom objectives into a music curriculum that fosters creativity and musical exploration. Activities include singing, playing instruments, movement, listening, music literacy, and summer-camp style games and activities that continue to expose students to music content and skills. The mission of Camp Granada is to provide the highest quality music camp experience in a child-centered environment that encourages participation, stimulates creativity, and focuses on fun; to increase each child's awareness and enjoyment of music; and to instill in each child a desire to continue musical involvement for a lifetime. Visit the companion website at www.granadamusic.org. The Hydromania II curriculum was written for the third in a series of summer science camp experiences targeting students in grades 4--6 who generally have difficulty accessing supplementary academic programs. The summer science camp in Portland is a collaborative effort between Bonneville Power Administration (BPA), the US Department of Energy (DOE), and the Portland Parks and Recreation Community Schools Program along with various other cooperating businesses and organizations. The curriculum has also been incorporated into other summer programs and has been used by teachers to supplement classroom activities. Camps are designed to make available, affordable learning experiences that are fun and motivating to students for the study of science and math. Inner-city, under-represented minorities, rural, and low-income families are particularly encouraged to enroll their children in the program. GETTING INTO COLLEGE IS HARDER THAN EVER! Even with great grades and test scores, you compete against the best in the world for limited spaces at top choice schools. You must finish the detailed tasks required to submit your application AND then convince the admissions officers why YOU deserve a place in the incoming freshman class. And the 500+ word essays are the only chance you have to separate yourself from the rest of the competition... BUT THERE IS HELP! The College Application Mastery Program (CAMP) is a home study course for students applying to college. CAMP takes you step-by-step from beginning the college list to submitting final college applications and everything in between. CAMP students learn:

- Ways to Reveal Your "A+ Applicant" - You have something amazing and unique to offer colleges. Will you "brand" yourself in a way that sets you apart, or will you be just another kid applying to college? Each application only gets 8 minutes for review. Make yours count.
- How to Write a Killer "Personal Marketing Statement" - You have limited words to set yourself apart from the 750,000 other students who are applying to college this year. How do you do that? Hint: It has nothing to do with what you have been taught about writing in school
- You Can Be a Great "Project Manager" - The deadline approaches. You procrastinate. The deadline gets closer. Your parents yell at you. You still procrastinate. The deadline is almost here and you've barely started. Now, it's panic time. There are strategies to avoid this happening.
- Always Rock Your Interviews - How do you give a great interview? Practice and preparation. Even if you do not have an admission interview, you may have scholarship (or job) interviews and you must be prepared. If you're not, kiss that scholarship (or job) goodbye!
- Secrets to Create Awesome Supplements - Every school asks "Why do you want to go here?" You must figure out a way to make each essay unique, even though you are answering the same question. Many schools often ask an additional question. The supplement writing can often be more difficult than your main personal marketing statement. But there are tricks you can learn.

Regardless of grades, test scores, activities or more, the College Application Mastery Program (CAMP) teaches you how to create a winning college application & get into to your #1 choice college. Camps often provide children with a first taste of independence and freedom from the restrictions of home and school, while offering a milieu full of opportunities for psychosocial development, creative interaction, and mutual aid. Enduring friendships often grow in the close-knit cabin groups and age cohorts, and professionally guided camps offer a nearly unique setting for strengths-based development in a nurturing environment. Though summer camps have provided social workers and future social workers with educational, practice, research, and theory-development opportunities as they direct, staff, attend, and provide supervision in these surroundings, the field has received limited scholarly attention. Not Just Play, the only book written in many decades that focuses on the relationship between social work and the summer camp movement, provides a comprehensive treatment of this underappreciated area of practice. In addition to updating their knowledge in the area, social workers and camp professionals will benefit from the authors' consideration of the many advantages and connections explored in the volume, which includes case vignettes alongside core scholarly research. In addition to the more extended pieces, numerous quotations gathered from interviews and online questionnaires are incorporated into the text, many from well-known social workers citing the influence of their camp experiences. As a whole, the resource offers readers a multifaceted examination of social work and summer camp that broadens their professional and scholarly perspective. For the project described in this paper, I created and implemented a curriculum for a 6-9th grade environmental art summer camp. The curriculum was inspired by the work of Aurora Robson and Alejandro Durán, and my desire to engage my students with environmental stewardship through art. I performed additional research on contemporary artists working with discarded materials, and themes of environmental sustainability and stewardship to share with my students. I utilized service-learning and community-based art practices with my students, and they created collaborative artworks from upcycled materials including litter collected during the camp, and conducted action research, documenting the educational activities and student reactions to the summer camp to assess the value of the activities and direct my instruction. These as well as action research informed my study. Student responses and learnings were assessed with online surveys, student notebooks, artwork, artists' statements, and discussions during the camp. The artworks were site-specific, temporary installations in the park by our school. The project was also documented in a blog on my website (<http://mrweathers.weebly.com/eco-art-camp-blog>).
