La vie familiale, la vie de travail de François Mauriac à Malagar, d'année en année aux mêmes saisons, depuis que son fils Claude est en âge de regarder, d'écouter, de noter. Malagar donc, de 1927 à aujourd'hui où François Mauriac reste vivant et présent. A cette terrasse, devant cet horizon de vignes et de forêts, quelques générations de la même famille ont rêvé, espéré, aimé, souffert. De cette vallée de la Garonne montèrent en 1914 les tocsins de la guerre, en 1940 le chant cruel des vainqueurs. La Terrasse de Malagar, ce n'est pas seulement une propriété familiale et ses enfances heureuses, ses adolescences songeuses, des existences qui passent. C'est aussi l'horizon d'une vie qu'une fois de plus Claude Mauriac découvre. Comme de la terrasse de Malagar une jumelle isolerait tel ou tel fragment du paysage immense, des premiers vignobles à la ligne forestière des Landes, des parcelles de temps, conservées vivantes dans un journal depuis cinquante années continué, sont arrachées au passé, rapprochées et rendues à leur actualité. Le Temps immobile ne doit pas être réduit à l'anecdote ni au montage, encore moins à la littérature. Ancré dans la durée, Malagar, ici, ne dérive plus. Et les Mauriac n'ont plus d'âge, du père de François aux enfants de Claude. This book presents an up-to-date portrait of the characteristics of sport clubs in various European countries and their role in society and the national sport system. Furthermore, it offers a cross-national comparative perspective of sport clubs in twenty European countries. Containing both empirical data and information on the political and historical backgrounds of sport clubs, the book is organized in three parts. First, the authors provide an overview of the theoretical approach of the book and a description of the framework used for the country chapters. Second, the country chapters, written by experts within the field, provide a systematic overview of the available information on sport clubs in each country. These chapters are structured to answer the following questions: (1) What is the position of sport clubs within the national sport structure? (2) Which role do they fulfil in policy and society? (3) What are their basic characteristics and what factors influence the development of sport clubs? The book is concluded with a systematic comparison of the participating countries with the purpose of forging a clear link between the functioning of policy systems, observed problems, and possible solutions, and with a future research agenda on sport clubs. In an era of increased collaboration between European states, sport provides a natural vehicle through which to compare changes in culture, economics, and policy across nations. Sport Clubs in Europe will appeal to scholars of nonprofit management, sports management and sports sociology as well as administrators and policy makers in the international sports community. Camping is perhaps the quintessential American activity. We camp to escape, to retreat, to "find" ourselves. The camp serves as a home-away-from-home where we might rethink a deliberate life. We also camp to find a new collective space where family and society converge. Many of us attended summer camps, and the legacies of these childhood havens form part of American culture. In Campsite, Charlie Hailey provides a highly original and artfully composed interpretation of the cultural significance and inherently paradoxical nature of camps and camping in contemporary American society. Offering a new understanding of the complex relationship between place, time, and architecture in an increasingly mobile culture, Hailey explores campsites as places that necessitate a unique combination of contrasting qualities, such as locality and foreignness, mobility and fixity, temporality and permanence, and public domesticity. Camping methods reflect the rigid flexibility of the process: leaving home, arriving at a site, clearing an area, making and then finally breaking camp. The phases of this sequence are both separate and indistinct. To understand this paradox, Hailey emphasizes the role of process. He constructs a philosophical framework to elucidate the "placefulness" -- or sense of place -- of such temporary constructions and provides alternative understandings of how we think of the home and of public versus private dwelling spaces. Historically, camps have been used as places for scouting out future towns, for clearing provisional spaces, and for making semipermanent homes-away-from-home. To understand how "cultures of camping" develop and accommodate this dynamic mix of permanence and flexibility, Hailey looks at three basic qualities of the camp: as a site for place-making, as a populist precursor for modern built environments, and as a "method." Hailey's creative and philosophical approach to camps and camping allows him to construct links between such diverse projects as the "philosophers' camps" of the mid-nineteenth century, the idiosyncratic camping clubs that arose with the automobile culture in the early 1920s, and more recent uses of campsites as temporary housing for those displaced by Hurricane Katrina. In Campsite, Hailey makes a singular and significant contribution to current studies of place and vernacular architecture while also reconfiguring methods of research in cultural studies, architectural theory, and geography.
