Farm Irrigation Mar 18 2023 There is no doubt that irrigation makes a major contribution to agricultural production, making a whole range of crops viable in an otherwise unreliable climate and helping insure against drought. However irrigation does not automatically guarantee a profit and acclaim, it is a high cost exercise, using water from increasingly scarce supplies, and contributes to environmental concerns of the community. Many of the pressures facing some irrigators have been caused by a lack of understanding in the past of best practices necessary in design, installation and management. Alternative methods of irrigation are presented, emphasising the characteristics of each that may make them suitable (or unsuitable) for particular situations. The range of crops under irrigation is very wide, and so too is the range of methods available to get water to them. Horticultural crops are included as well as broadacre crops. This section is followed by technical information of the various components that make up an irrigation system, and their installation. Irrigation is concerned with providing the optimum soil moisture conditions for plant growth. So too is drainage in that too much water in the soil will retard growth. Many of the concepts surrounding irrigation are applicable to a consideration of drainage, so the book discusses that technology as well.

Management of Traveler Gun Irrigation Systems in the Pacific Northwest ~~Nov~~ 24

2021 The traveling or reel big gun irrigation system is one of the most popular forms of irrigation in northwestern Washington. According to WSDA Crop Data for 2019, the total acreage irrigated by big guns was 38,760 acres, 29% of all big gun irrigation systems in Washington State. Many growers prefer the traveling gun since it is easy to set up but lack information on proper system management for water use efficiency and yield productivity. Good irrigation system management is vital for crop uniformity and quality. The focus of this publication is to provide information on how growers can properly manage traveling gun irrigation systems which can save water and energy and increase crop productivity and profitability.
